Species

Alder

Grown in the Pacific Northwest, Alder is processed and graded for a slightly darker and more consistent rich color, which is desired by most designers, builders and buyers. Alder is also known to hold and absorb stains and finishes wonderfully!

One word to describe wood from the cherry tree....Incredible! The rich reds and browns grow deeper with age while small dark specks add to its intriguing look and definition. Rustic Cherry has more pitch, mineral, sapwood and heartwood color variations with larger knots.

Cherry

Hickory

Hickory is a very dense and shock resistant wood. Aside from its durability, Hickory is also very beautiful. With an array of color ranging from soft white to rustic black your cabinets are sure to be one of a kind!

Grown in an ideal climate where soil conditions and genetic history of the species result in some of the finest Soft Maple in the United States. Maple is a hardwood with a naturally lighter color than the other species we offer. It also accepts stains and finishes beautifully.

Maple

Oak

Oak is a classic beauty that boasts a durable shock resistance as well as the ability to retain stains and finishes. The large, grainy texture of oak makes it the perfect species for added character.
Available in Red And White Oak

Walnut is one of nature's biggest accomplishments. With an array of color ranging from a light brown to a rustic black you can be sure that your Walnut cabinets will have a very unique look.

Paint Grade

High quality, paint ready HDF (High Density Fiberboard) is the ideal species for solid colors as you will not need to worry about the expansion and contraction that comes with natural hardwoods.

Laminate

Looking for a modern look with crisp lines to brighten your space? Look no further than a Textured Laminate door on a European cabinet box.
